It's a Difficult Life We Live

It was Labor Day—a gloriously sunny day here on Cape Cod. I was hanging out on the boat, catching some sun, going for an occasional swim; basically, living it up. The sunset was marvelous that night and I couldn't help but wish it lasted forever. However, I quickly came to my senses and realized that an endless summer would mean no winter and no skiing. My dream quickly turned into a nightmare. If any of us truly wanted those endless summers, we wouldn't be living in New England. After all, it's the seasonal contrast that grants us appreciation. Without winter, I would have never appreciated such a beautiful sunny day. And I sure did appreciate it, knowing there were so few days like that remaining.

We live a difficult life, don't we? Whenever someone complains to me about winter, I always suggest they find a winter hobby. Once winter becomes a passion, the time just flies by. So, we winter-sports enthusiasts have the best (or worst?) of both worlds. There just aren't enough winter months to get all those days in before the snow melts. But, once it does melt, there just aren't enough days in the summer to get all those projects done and find time to enjoy life on Cape Cod. This became brutally honest as I sat on the boat on Labor Day, wishing for just a few more days like that one.

The moral of the story is to make the most of every opportunity. Don't wait until March to start signing up for trips, wishing you had just a few more days to ski before spring begins. Sign up early and sign up often. Make this the season of no regrets. Not many people across the world get the opportunities we do, so we should take advantage of the opportunities when they arise.

As I say goodbye to another great summer, I start longing for and preparing for the upcoming winter. Fall is sure to go by quickly and we'll be gathering on the slopes in no time, looking down the hill at our very first run of the season. Savor every turn though—summer is just around the corner.

Want to ski for free?

Of course you do! And it's as easy as becoming a Trip Leader! We can't run all those great trips without someone to lead us. It's an easy job and for your efforts, the club will pick up your bus fee and lift ticket! It's also a great way to meet some of the great people in our club. All we ask is that you shadow one of veteran trip leaders before venturing out on your own.

Ask any club officer for more information or to volunteer.
